Painting the School

On a sunny summer day, Max was going to meet his friends and teachers at school. He asked his mom, “Can I ride my skateboard to school?” She answered, “As long as you put on your kneepads, that’s fine,” so he put on his kneepads, got on his skateboard, and headed to school.

When Max got to school, a lot of his friends and most of the teachers were already holding paint and paint brushes. Mr. Yamaguchi gave the directions, “Let’s make our school look beautiful again. If you run out of paint, please ask me for more.”

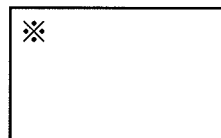

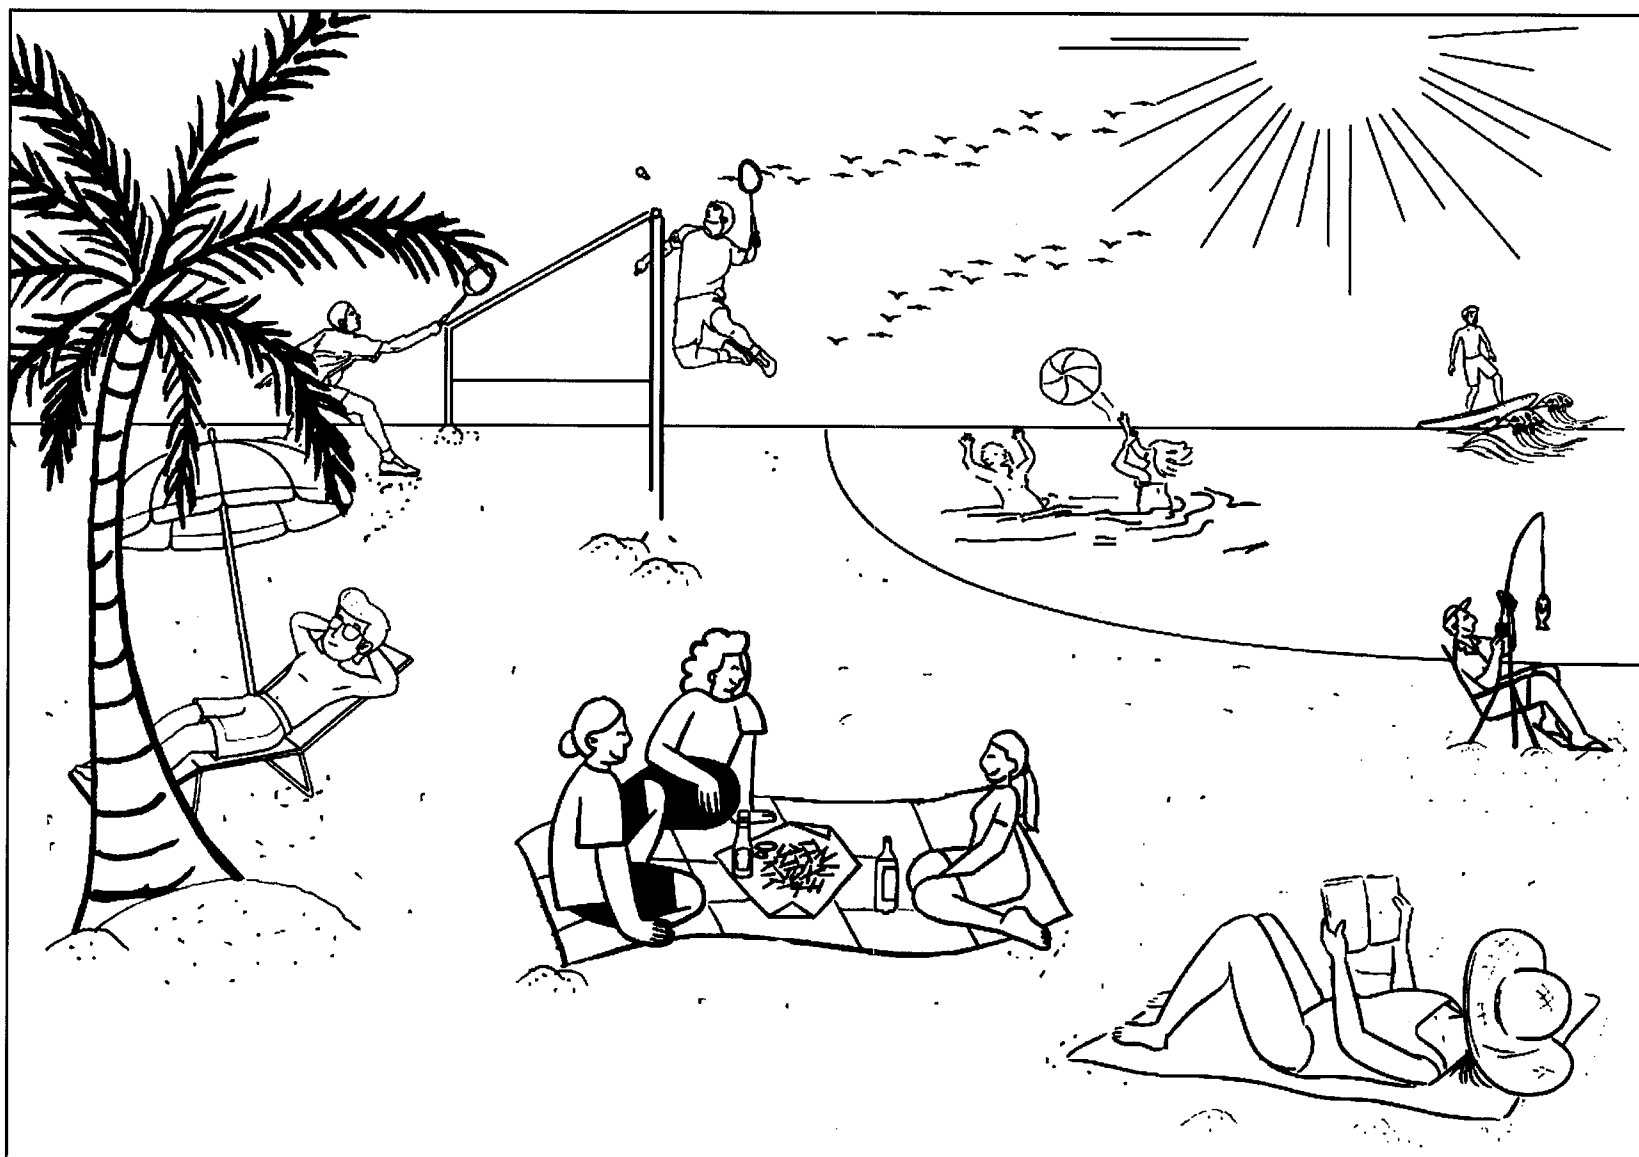

Room by room, the students and teachers had fun breathing life back into the school. As each room got painted, the school started to look like new. Max and his friend Sara had painted two rooms together. After three hours, all the classrooms had been painted. One of the teachers helped everyone put the empty paint cans into a truck before taking them to the city dump. Now, the school looked great.

“There is pizza and drinks downstairs for everyone. Help yourself to as much as you can eat,” said the teacher. When Max left school, he left feeling very full.
