Global Warming

The number of diverse species is decreasing in many forests of the world. The global temperature is increasing. In the forest of Brazil, the rising temperature is destroying many animals' homes. It is estimated that over 7,000 kinds of animals are living in places that they would not usually live. In fact, there are now only 20 places available for the animals to live.

In 2013, a business woman came up with an interesting environmental project to save the animals. She raised money to purchase large parts of the forest. She then created work projects where people could volunteer to help clean up areas that had too much litter and garbage. She advertised on TV that you can volunteer to help.

Her solution had one major advantage compared to others. She raised everyone's interest to help by using the TV. In this way, she didn't need anyone's permission for hiring people. She found people who wanted to help and didn't want anything in return. Now other people are showing interest in her idea. They want to help the endangered animals and are buying land in the forests.
